Nowadays, many parents choose homeschooling for their children, which means not every child is supposed to go to school to be educated.

Homeschooling becomes parents' choice because many parents are dissatisfied with the educational system. For example, there are so many students in a class that the teacher can't pay attention to every child. In addition, the tests bring pressure for children. Also, campus violence and drugs are the problems that parents worry about.

For homeschooled children, homeschooling provides them with a comfortable and safe learning environment. They can be taken good care of by their parents. They can also do their learning at their own speed without any pressure.

However, as they don't go to school, homeschooled children don't learn how to get along with peers, how to communicate with others and how to negotiate with others when there is an argument. Then, are parents qualified teachers to children in every professional subject? These are the problems that can not be neglected by parents who choose homeschooling.

Different children need different styles of education. Every way is possible. It's impossible to find or to create a kind of education which is suitable for every child. As parents, we have to understand that when the education can make our children learn happily and effectively, it is a proper and good one.
